Introduction to the IDS

About the IDS

The Immunology of Diabetes Society Congress brings together international health care professionals, consumers and research leaders in Type 1 Diabetes.

The Immunology of Diabetes Society (IDS) is an international scientific community dedicated to advancing the understanding, prevention and treatment of type 1 diabetes (T1D). Since 1995, the IDS convenes a biennial Congress, rotating among major centres in Europe, North America, and Asia/Oceania with up to 500 attendees.

The strength of the IDS lies in our global, multi-disciplinary and cooperative vision of addressing the greatest challenges in type 1 diabetes.

The biennial IDS Congress meetings are pivotal incubators for seminal discoveries, trial networks, and have fostered a vibrant community of global leaders with the mission to improve the lives of individuals at risk for and with type 1 diabetes.

The 2026 IDS congress will be held in partnership with the network of pancreatic organ donors (nPOD) and the Australian Islet Study Group.

Invitation from the IDS President

Sarah Richardson, PhD

It is my great pleasure to invite you to support and attend the 21st Immunology of Diabetes Society (IDS) Congress, which will be held in Brisbane in 2026. The IDS Congress is the premiere meeting for the international community of researchers, clinicians and industry representatives studying the pathogenesis and treatment of type 1 diabetes. Every 18 months, members of IDS convene to share the latest in cutting edge research, debate big questions in the field, and catch up with old and new colleagues. The Brisbane meeting is sure to be another memorable IDS meeting, and we look forward to your participation.

Invitation from the 2026 Congress Chair

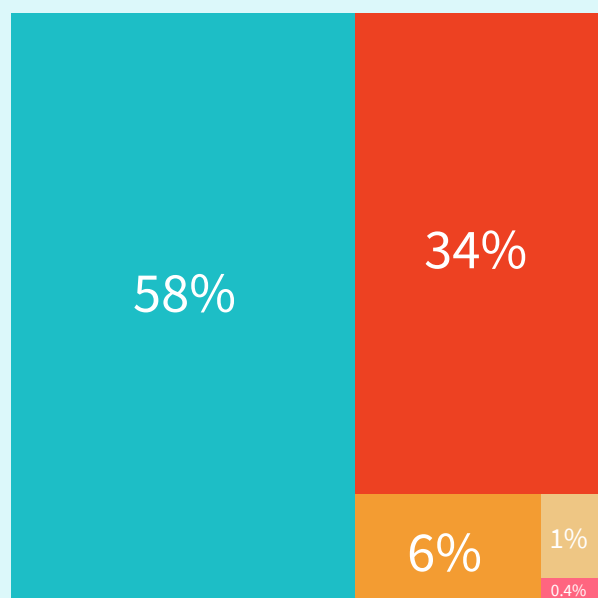

Emma Hamilton-Williams, BSc(Hons), PhD

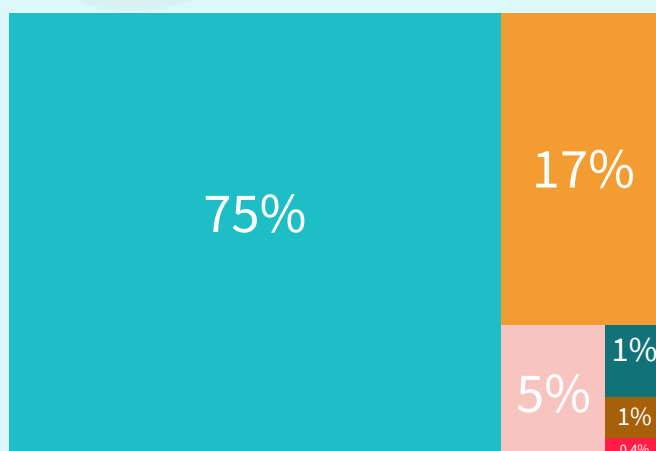

On behalf of the organising committee, I am delighted to invite you to the 21st Immunology of Diabetes Society Congress in Brisbane, Australia. The conference will convene a high-quality programme covering the most recent advances in type 1 diabetes pathogenesis, underlying mechanisms and therapeutic advances. Our goal is to create a conference that reflects the diversity of the type 1 diabetes research field. Brisbane is a vibrant, subtropical city offering a blend of natural beauty, cultural attractions and culinary delights. Extend your stay and discover our iconic beaches, unique Australian wildlife, coral reefs and rainforests.

IDS Membership Profile

IDS conference attendees and membership represent a diverse profile of basic and translational researchers, clinicians, students and industry professionals. The breadth of attendees includes specialists in immunology, islet biology, genetics, epidemiology, stem cell biology, big data, endocrinology, transplantation, pathology, paediatrics, nutrition and more. The conference is considered a must for all researchers interested in the pathogenesis and cure of type 1 diabetes. The IDS conference attendance has increased over the past decade from 293 in 2013 to ~500 in 2023.

Introduction to the AISG

About the AISG

The Australian Islet Study Group (AISG) meeting convenes the very best of islet biology, beta cell dysfunction and islet transplantation annually. The meeting focuses on innovation in islet development, stem cells, pathophysiology and transplantation with a focus on novel treatments and/or a cure for diabetes with 60-80 attendees. This conjoint meeting with IDS will offer the opportunity for cross-pollination of knowledge enabling a unique opportunity to share clinical know how, research tools and innovations in diabetes with the fundamental purpose of improving the lives of all people with diabetes.

Invitation from the ADS CEO

Sof Andrikopoulos, BSc, PhD

I am delighted to be hosting the IDS and AISG Conference in Brisbane in 2026. There have been significant advancements in type 1 diabetes research that are being translated to clinical practice, such that the possibility of delaying or even preventing this disease is becoming a reality. The Conference will serve as a platform for researchers and clinicians from across the globe to pursue this goal, fostering networking, discussion and collaboration. If you're coming from overseas, I encourage you to add a few more days to your visit to enjoy our wonderful country. If you are a local, I am sure you will make our international visitors feel welcome. I would like to thank the Organising Committee for their hard work to make this conference the best it can possibly be. I also would like to thank our generous sponsors who have made this conference possible.

Introduction to nPOD

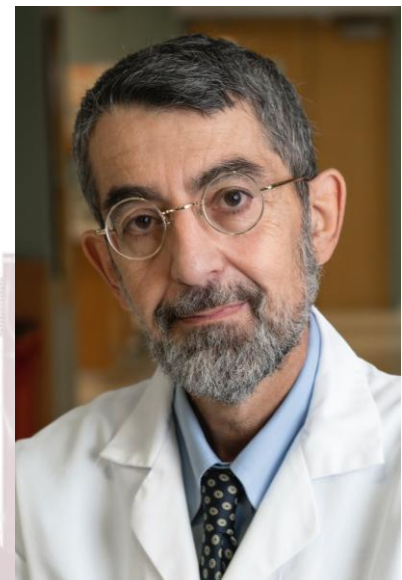

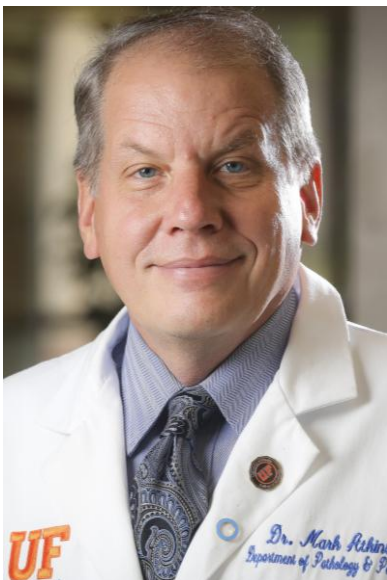

About nPOD

The 'Network for Pancreatic Organ Donors with Diabetes' (nPOD) was established in 2007 to advance research on the pathogenesis of human type 1 diabetes, by procuring pancreas and other tissues from organ donors at various disease stages. Specimens are provided to investigators, worldwide, to support innovative research and address vital scientific questions that cannot be addressed by animal models. nPOD also promotes collaboration, including working groups, to synergize researchers and catalyse new discoveries. Presently, we have working groups actively addressing 6 major key questions in diabetes research. For the first time, nPOD is pleased to partner with the IDS in support of the 2026 congress. We will highlight recent progress made by nPOD working group and nPOD investigators, and we welcome you to join us.

Objectives for IDS2026Brisbane

1

Advance the Understanding of Immunology of Diabetes

To present and disseminate cutting-edge research on the immunological aspects of type 1 diabetes, including the interplay between the immune system and metabolic pathways, the role of autoimmunity, and strategies for delay and prevention of diabetes. Encourage submissions of new research findings and methodologies.

2

Foster Multidisciplinary Collaborations

Promote collaborations across diverse fields such as molecular biology, clinical research, and bioinformatics to foster a multidisciplinary approach to type 1 diabetes research. Create networking events, collaborative workshops, and joint sessions with researchers from various disciplines.

3

Encourage the Development and Clinical Translation of Therapies

Focus on bridging the gap between research and clinical practice. Showcase emerging therapeutic technologies and immunotherapies that target the immune system to prevent or treat diabetes, including antigen-specific therapies, immune modulation, mechanisms of natural protection, and regenerative medicine focusing on the islet.

4

Promote Young Investigators and Diversity in Research

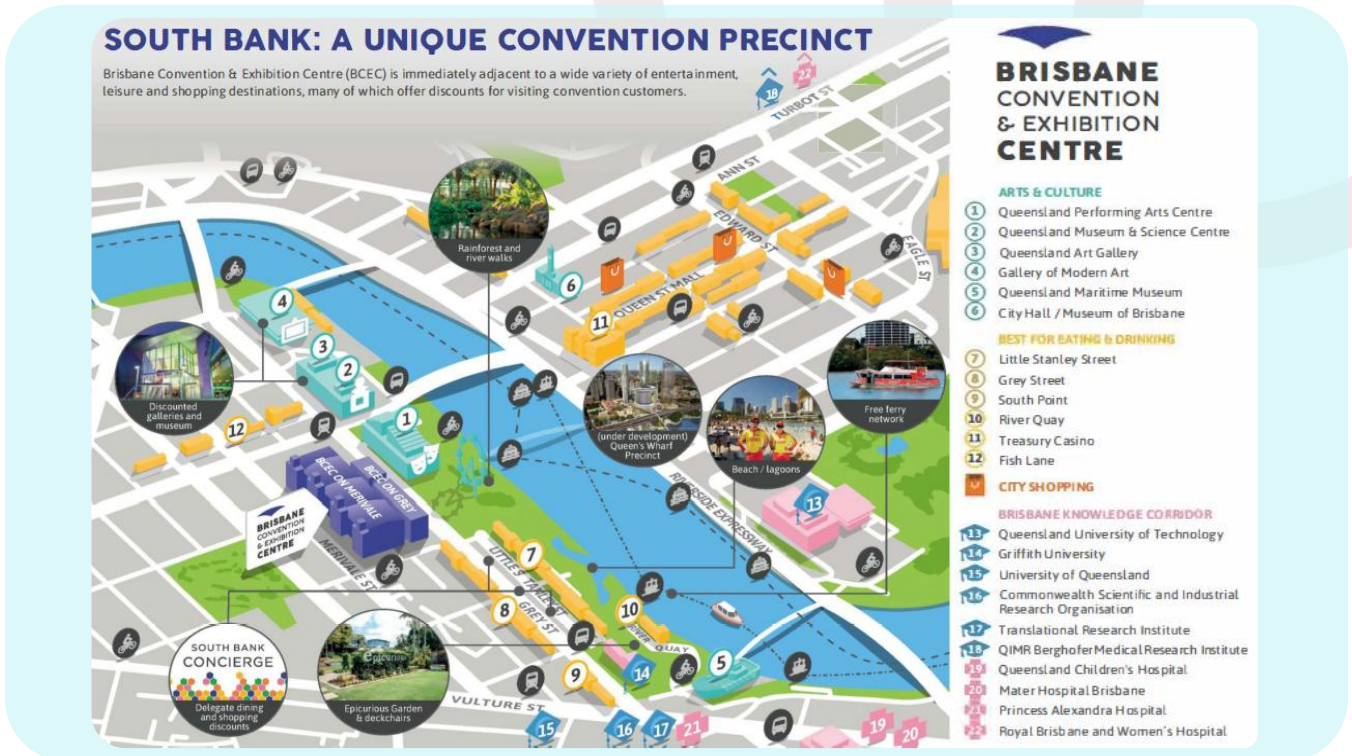

Support and showcase the work of young investigators and underrepresented groups in the field of immunology and type 1 diabetes research. Include dedicated sessions for new researchers, awards for outstanding contributions, and scholarships for attendance and presentation at the Congress.

5

Globalise the Impact of Diabetes Research

Extend the reach of diabetes immunology research by integrating perspectives from researchers in low- and middle-income countries, regions with increasing type 1 diabetes burdens, and the Asia-Pacific region. Promote global thinking around diabetes with presentations focused on the global epidemiology of diabetes and the impact of diabetes among First Nations people.
